MR. B-AINE'S DECLINATION.

Opinions from Leading Papers of Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8. The Herald, this morning, says, editorially: "The popular conception of James G. Blaine's character will manifest itself. to day, in the question, which will be very generally propounded, "Does he mean what he says in his letter to iMr. Clarkson?" It will be very difficult to convince the conscienceless theory that has followed so long his devious path, that his latest expression means, what the words imply. The Clarkson letter comes too late to be regarded as spontaneous and wholly sincere."

"Suddenly I heard some one shout, and the next moment I saw three men stand-ling at the side of the trail several rods ahead. Before I realized this the steers dashed past the men and then I heard rifles crack a number of times, and I noticed that the wolves stopped howling at the heels of the steers. Pretty soon the steers slickened their speed and I talked to them slickened their speed and I talked to them until they came to a walk, when I jumped off and halted them, turning them from the trall. The riles kept cracking up the creek, and I ran back and found that the three men had killed eleven of the wolves. They were my father and two older brithers and they had started out in search of me, fearing that something had happened to me. I was about used up, and as I said before, I came nearer losing my life that night than I ever have since them." Death of Capt. Robert M. Stevens. BIDDEFORD, Feb. 8. Capt. Robert M. The despatch con-

tems some significant the counts, as will be seen by the following extracts: Prople here were hard'd sure whether he came down to take his sent in the Senats for to meet and manipulate the National Henocratic Commit er, and before they were satisfied on that point Hill was manipulating another committee in New York, and from their oppears to have skipped up to Athany to pull the wires that worst the puppers of a State Cin Vention.

In a mar who is arowedly a candidate for the Presidency this assidious attention to thise forces and unfluences in political life that, if known to because, sential distinct, are of the shody son and might well be kept a lattificant of sight, is a there of uncomplainting observation.

Hall's best friends shake their heads about it. A famous hero desaw on the A farmus share their neares about it. A farmus here the saw on the walls the legend. "He bodit; be hold; but he not too boble," so they wish that David might see somewhere so that it might necess him keenly the legend; "Be smit; he smart, but be not too smart."

in press time scenity, the fegura? "He smart, the smart, but be not too smart." Some of them indeed are straightent David has aleady sawed off the imb be was sitting on sawing, as the little darkey did, between himself and the tree.

Wishington very broadly recognizes the political machine as an apparatus that the people commonivenes, secares it is convenient, and in the main facilitates the accomplishment of the purposes they have at hose; but, noverthelasts, as an apparatus not necessary to the couple and which they will very influes by musch and potation at definite purpose of the people.

It is said with much kindly regreat not lift, with all his feeting and daving may after all be only preparing a case of that

The Camerburks see indeed of a very "shady sort" and the fact that one of his heretofore warm suppor ets féels compelled to warn him that wh le much will be forgiven blue, he is in danger of carrying his scheme too far, is a very forcible illus tration of the strained condition of affairs that now prevails in the Democratic party. This plain talk from the World is liable to cause our Bangor contemporary to froth at the mouth. The fact is that Hill has crowded on too much sail and is in danger of being wrecked before the June conven tion. He appears to be proving the old saying that give such a man rope enough and he will lang himselfs.

Comment in Washington. [Wash, Despatch to Port and Press, Feb. '.] The official anhouncement of Mr Blaine's withdrawal from the Presidential race created a great sensation here this evening. It is true he news has been talked about for the past week, but so many people believed that Mr. B aine would remain in the race and be the Republican candidate for the Presidency, that when at last, over his own signature, he announced that he was not a candidate. there were many expressions of disap-

While it will assist the Bresilient in his effort for a renomination there will be other cardidates? in the field and the convention will not resolve dealt into a ratification meeting. Senators Allison of lows and Cullom are avowed candidates. So is then eral Algor of Michigan, while Mr. Mc. F RST MOT 1 GE JALS. Kinley is regarded as a very strong pos-sibility. The name of Mr. Reed has been frequently mentioned to-night and there is a formidable body of men in both Houses of Congress who would like to see the Mr. Reed pominated. They say that a ticket reading Reed and Alger would be a sure waster, and it is not at all on the y

Thought That No Lives Were .ost In the Conflagration.

Mannins, Tub., Feb. 8. At 0.30 to-night, a building occupied by the Bruse, herne Hat Co. was discovered on fire. The entire rear portion of the six story building from basement to top seemed ablaze in an irstant.

The fire quickly communicated to the front portion and by 10 the firemen were forced back from the rearing furnace of hats and straw goods and directed their efforts to sav ug the trunk factory of S. Levy adjoining the hat store.

At 10.50 the building occupied by the hat company collapsed and crashed the building of the Langstaff Hardware Co., which adjoined it at the south.

Lendon's Nest Beautiful Woman. There is a great controversy going on in London now as, to who is the most beautiful woman in society. There are Lady Dudley and the Princess of Wales, who defy the flight of time and regn queens of beauty forever. The Duchess of Leinster and her sister bear away the palma from hosts of lesses beauties, but above them all, when the history of the period is written, will be recorded the name of Lady Brooke. There is something incontestably victorious in the beauty of her pale features, her glowing, splendii, eyes, the riquant charm of her upliffied chin and the haughty danguorous grace of her smile. Care for Musical Instruments.

Neither a piano nor an organ should be left open at night, or asbitually when not in use. The changes of temperature are very burtful to the tone of any instrument, and especially the gathering of dampness, which not only interferes with the tone and quality of the strings and reeds but is very likely scriously to affect the works. Pianos in particular should be kept in as even a temperature as possible, since they are much affected by alternatic as of heat and cold, dryness and motature; if thus exposed they require very frequent tuning, and are not estisfactory in action or tone. Care is also equally desirable in regard to other stringed instruments—the violin family banjor, guitars and like. In all of these the strings are much affected by exposure to dampness and great changes of temperature. All fine instruments should be habitually kept in cases lined with baize or fiannel.—Good Houselsesping.
